NEWARK PUBLIC LIBRARY

GENERAL INFORMATION

This directory has been prepared to provide certain information which is available to the public under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act on the approximately 15,045 Federally-insured credit unions in operation as of December 1985. It is prepared in a format which provides information most often requested. The directory is being furnished at cost and is updated annually.

The following information will assist in the effective use of the directory.

1. The directory contains the names of all Federally-chartered credit unions and those State-chartered credit unions insured by the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund (NCUSIF). Not included in this directory are the approximately 2,500 State-chartered credit unions that are either uninsured or covered by other insurance plans.

2. The directory contains the following information on each credit union: charter or share insurance certificate number, name, address, name of principal operating officer, telephone number and assets as of December 31, 1985.

3. Credit Unions are listed in alphabetical sequence within state.

4. State-chartered credit unions can be identified by a number in the charter number column (chart #) in the 60,000 and above sequence. All other numbers represent Federally-chartered credit unions.

5. When addressing Federally-chartered credit unions, the words "Federal Credit Union" should appear after the name. State chartered credit unions should have the words "Credit Union."

Additional information can be obtained by writing to:

FACTS ABOUT FEDERAL CREDIT UNIONS

WHAT A FEDERAL CREDIT UNION IS

A Federal credit union is a member-owned cooperative organized to promote thrift among its members and to make loans to its members from these accumulated savings. It is not in business for profit, but for service. Thus, it is a unique financial institution. It is also a corporation chartered, supervised and insured by the Federal Government through the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA).

WHAT A FEDERAL CREDIT UNION DOES

Credit unions encourage their members to accumulate savings out of income as a means of building economic security for themselves and their families. In addition, credit unions provide consumer and, in some cases, home mortgage loans. With these and other benefits credit unions help their members to help themselves to a greater degree of financial stability.

Credit unions are not new. The credit union movement in the United States is dated from 1909, when Massachusetts passed the first State credit union law. Since then most of the States have passed similar laws. Cooperative credit union societies have been known in Europe and Asia for more than a century.

MEMBERSHIP IN A FEDERAL CREDIT UNION

Membership in a Federal credit union is limited to those groups or persons with a common bond of employment, association or residence as specified in its charter.

To become a member, one must first be eligible under the common bond provisions as specified in the credit union's charter and submit a membership application. Some Federal credit unions may charge a nominal entrance fee. Upon approval of the membership application and payment of at least the first installment toward the purchase of a share one becomes a member with voting rights.

EXTENT OF GROWTH

In terms of size and amount of business transacted, Federal credit unions have experienced strong, steady growth. In just 10 years, for example, total resources and members' savings have more than tripled, while loans outstanding were more than two and a half times larger than they were at the end of 1974. As of yearend 1985, there were 10,125 natural person Federal credit unions in operation with 29.6 million members and $78.2 billion in assets.

FEDERAL ACT

The Federal Credit Union Act was passed in 1934. It provides for the chartering and supervision of Federal credit unions. Its general provisions are similar to those of many State credit union laws and are based on the best experience gained under the State laws that preceded its passage by Congress. The Federal Credit Union Act has been amended periodically to keep it a modern credit union law. The Depository Institutions Act of 1982 contained a number of modernization amendments to the Act which position Federal credit unions to meet the challenge of the 1980's. A contemporary law coupled with a deregulatory thrust by the National Credit Union Administration Board enables Federal credit unions to offer a variety of services to meet the financial needs of their members. For example, many Federal credit unions offer share drafts, share certificates, Individual Retirement Accounts and other special accounts in addition to a regular passbook type share savings account account. Also, in recent years, many Federal credit unions have expanded their lending services to include real estate and guaranteed student loans as well as the more traditional consumer loans. Generally new credit unions do not, of course, offer this vast array of services during the first months of operation. However the potential for becoming such a full service organization provides additional incentive for the officials of new Federal credit unions to actively promote and develop their credit union.

HOW A FEDERAL CREDIT UNION OPERATES

Cultivation of the habit of systematic saving is a basic purpose of credit unions. Saving regularly, therefore, is encouraged. Savings by members may be made in small or large amounts.

Out of funds accumulated from these savings, loans may be made to members of the credit union. The board of directors of each Federal credit union has authority to fix the limits for loans and to revise them as the credit union grows. The interest rate on these loans is also established by the credit union's Board of Directors. The interest and other finance charges are disclosed in total and as an Annual Percentage Rate in compliance with the Truth in Lending Act. Federal credit unions operate in compliance with this and all other Federal consumer protection laws, including the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. The latter requires that credit be made available to all members without regard to sex, marital status, race, age, or other prohibited bases.

CONTROL AND MANAGEMENT

Control of management is in the hands of the members of the credit union. A board of directors is elected at the annual meeting of the members. Each member has one vote regardless of the number of shares owned. The board elects the officers from its own membership and appoints a supervisory committee.

Experience has shown that the credit union can depend upon the unselfish service of these unpaid volunteer officials. Even the treasurer very often serves without pay, or for only a nominal salary in the first year or two of the credit union's life.

EARNINGS

Net earnings from loan operations and other sources may be distributed to the members after a portion of gross income is set aside in the reserves for loan losses. During 1985 natural person Federal credit unions paid more than $5 billion in dividends to their shareholder members. The board of directors has wide latitude in determining the credit union's dividend rate(s) and terms. The average annual rate paid on regular savings in 1985 was 7.25%.

SAFETY

Member share accounts in Federal credit unions are insured up to $100,000 per account by NCUA. Savings have additional protection through a number of provisions in the Federal Credit Union Act and the standard bylaws. Some of these are:

(1) The treasurer must be bonded for faithful performance of his/her duties, and all persons handling or have custody of credit union funds must also be bonded.

(2) The affairs of the credit union and the records of the treasurer are audited by the supervisory committee.

(3) The Act and the bylaws for the setting aside of a reserve for uncollectible loans.

(4) The surplus funds of the credit union may be invested only in specified investments.

(5) All Federal credit unions are supervised and are periodically examined by the National Credit Union Administration.

BENEFITS TO EMPLOYER OR OTHER SPONSOR

Credit unions do not require outside financial support, and there is no necessary cost to any employer whose employees organize a credit union. Many employers, however, find credit unions so beneficial in maintaining employee morale and efficiency that they are glad to provide space on the premises to serve as a credit union office. Thus the credit unon can become an important fringe benefit.

In addition, when the employer is willing to permit payroll deductions for credit union payments, experience has shown that operations are simplified and that the credit union serves a larger number of members.

Many employers permit employees to spend some official time conducting credit union business, especially during the first few months of operation. The personnel office and the credit union can be mutually helpful in assisting employees to help themselves and in making the credit union generally effective as an employee service organization. In fact, educating members to maintain their own financial affairs is the third basic function of credit unions - the other two being the promotion of thrift and providing credit. There are similar benefits to other types of sponsors.

HOW TO START A FEDERAL CREDIT UNION

If you think a Federal credit union would help you and the others where you work, or the members of an association to which you belong, or the people in your community, first discuss the need with members of the group. Second, if the group is interested, write or call the appropriate regional office of the National Credit Union Administration. That office will be pleased to provide further information and, in many instances, will send a representative to talk to your group and answer questions. If your group is eligible, NCUA's regional staff will help you prepare an application for a charter and see that your group receives help in getting your Federal credit union started. The services of the National Credit Union Administration are available at no cost or obligation.

On the following page is a list of the regional offices of the National Credit Union Administration, showing States which each serves.
